OPEN DOORS TO HEALTH FACILITIES

DON'T MISS SERVICE OPPORTUNITIES

Expanding healthcare facility credentialing requirements have created a barrier for many businesses throughout the U.S. Unfortunately an immense time and monetary burden has fallen on the companies that require facility access to both manage credentialing and ensure compliance.

“Over 90% of healthcare facilities have some type of vendor credentialing requirement for access”
(American Hospital Association)

Employee access to these facilities is a necessary core business function for many companies.

A non-exhaustive list of major industries that are impacted by the the ever-evolving credentialing landscape can be found below:

Impacted Industries

- Pharmaceutical Sales
- Bio-medical Technicians
- Medical Equipment Suppliers
- Home Care Providers
- Medical Consultants
- Nurse Staffing Companies
- Delivery Companies
- Clinical Education Specialists

WHY DOES IT MATTER?

As mandated by the CDC, employees who need to work in a healthcare setting are required to show proof of immunity against infectious diseases and be free of infectious diseases. This is all done in an effort to keep both healthcare staff and patients safe.

Necessary procedures include titer testing, vaccinations and TB tests. Throw in drug testing as part of hospital safety compliance, and businesses are responsible for ensuring their employees complete multiple medical screenings before they can even step foot inside a healthcare facility.

THE ROADBLOCKS OF NON-COMPLIANCE

Not compliant with the required medical credentialing for the facility you need to access? You can be certain that until your employees meet their standards, they won't be able to walk into the building. No access means missed opportunities, service delays and lost revenue.

WHY EMPLOYERS SEEK OUT NMS

Managing a credentialing program in addition to normal business functions is costly and inundates HR departments. A large amount of resources must be dedicated to program management instead of being focused on other meaningful projects.

Some of the most common reasons NMS is sought out by employers are:

A need for a truly integrated solution combining coast to coast coverage, record retrieval, scheduling, and medical review

A search for a dependable partner that will ensure their employees will both gain and keep access to the medical facilities they service

A need for a one stop shop that can oversee the end the end process of titer testing, exams, vaccination management, drug screening and TB testing

Their current provider is unresponsive to inquiries and is causing delays in fulfilling service opportunities

NMS is a fully managed occupational health and HCIR credentialing solution that starts with electronic ordering and ends with facility compliance
